PROCEDINGS

THE COURT: Good afternoon, Judge. We are here for a status conference in 21-cv-260-PB, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission vs. LBRY, Inc.

THE COURT: All right. I wanted to consult with you regarding our next steps. Let me first hear from the SEC and then from LBRY.

MR. MOORES: Thank you. Peter Moores on behalf of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

We have had discussions with counsel for LBRY and have tried to fashion a schedule for the Court going forward.

I think next steps would be remedies. The parties have spoken to see if we could, you know, resolve it short of the Court's involvement.

But barring that, we think that there's probably a need for a very short period of -- and when I say we, again, this is just the Commission's position. We are -- we're not currently in agreement on a schedule. But we believe there would be just a need for a short period of discovery, we're proposing 45 days, and that is just to determine whether or not -- how to calculate if there's to be disgorgement or some other equitable remedy here and just sort of to update some of the discovery that we have already received from LBRY as to sort of subsequent sales in order to make a calculation and make a recommendation or a proposal to the Court. We think that that would then follow with a briefing schedule.

So essentially the SEC's brief on remedies would be due approximately 60 days from today, so that would be approximately January 20th. Then LBRY, to the extent it wanted to file a brief in opposition or with its own proposal as an appropriate remedy, would be following the Court's schedule, which I think is about three weeks later, and that's about February 10th, 2023, with a reply brief due about a week later, according to the local rules as to scheduling, approximately February 17th.

So the 45 days, your Honor, would take us to about January 5th. That would just give us time to propound sort of updated interrogatories or requests and then our brief would be due 15 days after the close of that brief factual window -- factual discovery window for -- only for remedies purposes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you anticipate the need for an evidentiary hearing?

MR. MOORES: I would think that we could do it on the papers, your Honor, with perhaps an affidavit submission basically calculating the number of sales and the amount of money that was generated and what would be appropriate other remedies, injunctive relief, penalties, et cetera, your Honor.

So at this time we would not anticipate the need for an evidentiary hearing.

THE COURT: And what have you done to try to meet 1 2
    and confer and agree upon a proposed schedule?
 3
                MR. MOORES: Your Honor, we've spoken a couple times 4 with LBRY's counsel and as of the last conversation, we did not have an agreed-upon schedule, although I leave it to Mr. Miller or Ms. Mechanic as to what LBRY's current position is. It 6 7
    might have changed since we last talked.
 8
                THE COURT: All right. What are LBRY's views as to how we should proceed?
 9
10
                MR. MILLER: Good afternoon, your Honor. Keith 11
    Miller representing LBRY.
12
                Your Honor, to be frank, the company doesn't have 13
    45 days.
              It has -- 14
                THE COURT: I'm sorry.
                MR. MILLER: It has a -- 15
16
                THE COURT: I'm sorry. Could you repeat what you 17 said? I didn't hear it all.
18
                MR. MILLER: Sure.
                The company doesn't have 45 days. Okay? And I've 19 20 explained that to the SEC in an attempt to try to resolve this.
21
                The SEC is entitled -- is asking for three things, 22
    your Honor: An injunction, disgorgement, and civil penalties.
23
                I've explained to the SEC that disgorgement would 24 not be appropriate in this case. Why? Because they have alleged in their complaint that all the money that they raised in connection with this Section 5 violation went into the operations. It's paragraph 6 of their -- of their -- of their complaint. Now they want to get disgorgement. I've explained to them -- there's a recent Supreme Court case called SEC vs. Liu where the Supreme Court has said if you're going to get disgorgement -- first of all, it's questionable whether you can get disgorgement in a Section 5 case, but if you do get disgorgement, they have to be offsetted by legitimate business expenses. The SEC has -- has pled that the -- everything they've raised was used for operations here. In addition, in the most recent settlement case -well, large settlement case that the SEC has brought against -in New York in SEC vs. Kik, which they settled, after a finding on summary judgment, the SEC ended up not obtaining disgorgement in that case and getting about a 5 percent of the total raise in a fine. The SEC doesn't want to talk about that. They want disgorgement. They want to have a hearing on disgorgement. And I think what we would ask the Court to do is appoint an immediate mediator to try to get this resolved. The company doesn't have 45 days. THE COURT: Okay. What is the SEC's response to LBRY's request that I appoint a mediator? MR. MOORES: Your Honor, I'm not sure if that would actually advance the situation here.

I believe, as Mr. Miller was alluding to, there's a difference of opinion as to the applicable law and that's why we were proposing a briefing schedule to the Court, to decide what is the appropriate equitable remedy, disgorgement, et cetera.

With respect to mediation, I think what Mr. Miller started with is that the company doesn't have long to live.

I'm not sure if the parties could get through mediation any quickly -- or more quickly than it could in terms of the limited discovery and, you know, within 60 days our brief would be to the Court.

THE COURT: Well, let me just interrupt and ask. I may be reading into his statement, but I think his position is that disgorgement would not be an appropriate remedy in this case based on facts that could be presented without any discovery and that we should really have briefing on an accelerated basis on the pure legal issue if we can't agree to mediation, that we should give him a chance to move before discovery that the remedy you're seeking is not one that you're legally entitled to have.

So I -- I strongly favor efforts at this point for the SEC to work with LBRY and try to come up with an acceptable way to resolve this case. It seems to me that the -- the principal point that the SEC was trying to make it made in its summary judgment motion and it -- either that will be appealed ultimately or -- or not.

But what follows from here seems to be the kind of thing that I would very strongly favor trying to resolve by agreement. And if we can't, my inclination would be to say, all right, let's give LBRY a chance to present what I think they're arguing to me, that, Judge, you just shouldn't do this and there are legal reasons why the remedy they're seeking are not appropriate.

And so I guess that's -- my starting point is, boy, this seems like a case where the SEC should be willing to engage in efforts to mediate, but, secondly, given LBRY's precarious financial situation, I would be strongly inclined -- if what LBRY's really seeking in the alternative is an opportunity to persuade me that as a matter of law the SEC shouldn't get the remedy it's seeking, I'd be inclined to do that before ordering a period for additional discovery that seems to be based on the assumption that, of course, the SEC's entitled to disgorgement.

So let me just go back to LBRY and say have I read you right, sir? Are you really saying to me that, hey, Judge, we'd really like mediation, but if you don't -- for some reason aren't inclined to do that, give us a chance to persuade you on an expedited basis that as a matter of law the SEC should not be entitled to the remedy it's trying to seek from us and there shouldn't be any period of discovery on it?

                MR. KAUFFMAN: May I speak?
                THE COURT: It's up to -- your lawyer should -- if 2 3
     you want to speak privately with your lawyer, I can move you
     into a -- 5
                MR. KAUFFMAN: Keith, I would like to speak, if 6
     that's all right you.
 7
                THE COURT: It's okay --
                MR. MILLER: Your Honor --
 8
                THE COURT: Sir, let me ask counsel first.
 9
                Would you like an opportunity to speak to your 10 11
     client in a breakout room or -- I'm generally very willing to 12
    hear what a client wants to say, so -- but if you want to speak 13 to him in a breakout room first, I'm willing to move you into a 14 breakout room. So let me just ask counsel first.
                And I say this, Mr. Kauffman, because I've worked 15 16 with lawyers over my entire career. They're control freaks and 17 they can't stand the thought that their clients would want to 18 say anything to the judge and they're scared to death whenever 19 the client does. So just as a courtesy to the lawyer, I'm 20 going to give him a chance to talk to you, if that's what he 21 wants to do. But if he wants -- if he will let you speak, I'd 22 be happy to.
23
                So let me just ask counsel. What's your preference 24
    here? Do you want to speak to him in a breakout room -- 25
                MR. MILLER: Yeah.
```

1
                THE COURT: -- or should he fire away?
 2
                MR. MILLER: If we could speak in a breakout room -- 3
                MR. KAUFFMAN: Well, I would like to speak to the 4
    judge, though.
 5
                THE COURT: Yeah, I --
                MR. MILLER: Yes, I --
 6
 7
                THE COURT: -- I will give you ultimate -- I just want to ask you to consult first.
 8
 9
                MR. KAUFFMAN: Okay.
                THE COURT: At the end of the day, Mr. Kauffman, if 10 11 after consulting you still want to speak, I won't -- I won't 12
    shut you down. I'll give you a chance to speak. Okay?
13
                So, Jen, just move them into a breakout room. You can both exit out', when you're ready, you'll come back.
14
15
                But, Mr. Kauffman, I want to be clear. I won't deny 16
    you the opportunity to speak. Okay?
17
                MR. MOORES: Your Honor, if I may, before we go to 18 breakout room, just one -- 19
                THE COURT: Who's speaking now?
                THE CLERK: Mr. Kauffman already -- 20 21
                MR. MOORES: Peter Moores on behalf of the SEC.
22
                THE CLERK: -- went into the breakout room.
23
                THE COURT: Yeah, Mr. Kauffman's already in the breakout room. So I'm going to move -- 24
25
                MR. MOORES: Okay.

```
THE COURT: -- counsel there as well.
 1
 2
               MR. MILLER: Thank you, your Honor.
        (Defendant and counsel conferred in a breakout room.)
 3
 4
                THE COURT: Jen, you haven't moved him?
                THE CLERK: He is in there. His audio wasn't 5 working, so his cell phone is in the breakout room and he's 6 7 speaking to -- 8
                THE COURT: I still see him on my screen.
 9
                THE CLERK: Yeah. I added him in there. He didn't choose to go in with his video. He only chose to go in with 10 his audio.
11
12
                THE COURT: Oh, okay. I just don't want him to 13 think we can hear what he's saying.
14
                THE CLERK: Yeah. He knows that we can't.
15
                THE COURT: Okay. All right.
16 Hold on. Now he went in.
17
                THE COURT: All right, Mr. Kauffman. Your lawyer's 18 going to move -- move the lawyer back in for a second.
19
               MS. MECHANIC: Can you put me in there as well?
20
                THE CLERK:
                           Yup.
21
               MS. MECHANIC: This is Rachel Mechanic. Thank you.
22
                THE CLERK: Yeah.
                THE COURT: This is musical chairs here.
23
24
                THE CLERK: Do you want to go back in now, Attorney 25 Mechanic?

1 MS. MECHANIC: Yes, if there's --2 MR. MILLER: We're back, Rachel. 3 MS. MECHANIC: Oh, you're back. Okay. Then no. 4 THE CLERK: Okay. 5 MS. MECHANIC: Thank you. THE COURT: All right. So, Mr. Kauffman, you've had 6 7 a chance to consult with your lawyer. As I said, I won't cut you off if you wanted to say something. Did you want to speak? 8 MR. KAUFFMAN: Well, I promise not to talk for too 9 long, but I just wanted to be sort of explicit about the 10 11 current situation. 12 I mean, we have been going back and forth with the 13 SEC for five years. Throughout that entire period, we have 14 begged them, we've said, we will do anything, make any 15 changes -- like there are other currencies like Ethereum and 16 bitcoin that have this non-securities designation. We've 17 said -- we offered years ago, we'll destroy the entire premine. 18 We offered years ago, we'll fold the entire company and give 19 you every dollar in our bank accounts. All that we have ever wanted was to achieve the same legal status that these other 20 21 cryptocurrencies have. 22 I consider you, Judge, and the SEC together to be 23 something that is bordering on omnipotence. Okay? The United 24 States Government is the most powerful force in the world. I'm 25 not -- I just want to know the rules. Tens of thousands of other companies just want to know the rules. It's okay if we lose. You can issue a judgment for a bajillion dollars. Okay? We have three weeks left. You know, that's fine. I -- we can lose. You guys make the rules. I'm not trying to argue.

What I don't -- what I would like to come out of this is at least some knowledge of what the rules are. There are so many smart people who want to be building and working in this -- in this field. Everyone in my company, whether we work at LBRY or not, wants to keep doing this work. And I -- I thought for sure that by the end of this we would at least know what they are. And -- and still no one does.

And we're going to end up in a situation, like I don't -- I honestly don't care about arguing the penalties. I mean, you guys have won. LBRY is almost certainly dead. It's almost certainly all dead. The SEC's objective of bankrupting us through the process, which they threatened privately three years ago, they succeeded. So we're not trying to fight.

But I -- I mean, I just don't know if you appreciate the amount of chaos that has been created by this decision and the complete lack of understanding that the industry still has about what they can and cannot do.

But, you know, we would destroy everything if, for example, it would -- the SEC would be -- make it clear that secondary market -- that secondary sales aren't securities sales. They're still going to argue that they are and it's going to be another five years in court.

So, like, the project is dead. It's dead. Okay?

And, like, we're not trying to save it. It's been killed.

There's no path forward. Like -- but at least if the industry could get something out of this to have some clarity about what the rules are and aren't. Because even with this, it's honestly just made it worse. And the SEC is just going to continue what it has been doing for years. They've issued zero no-action letters, they tie you up in this process, and it's exactly what they want to continue to do. Okay? And it's what they're going to continue to do to more companies.

There isn't a single company that anyone on this call from the SEC would be able to say what they're doing is legal. And what they do is they pick from a set of a hundred thousand companies -- my company happens to platform some conservative figures, it happens to platform gun manufacturers, do some things that the left centrists that run our regulatory agencies don't like -- they use their discretion and their power to crush us. And they've won. I'm not trying to fight. I accept completely that this is the outcome.

But if there could be any clarity so that people could know, how do you legally launch a cryptocurrency? Is it the only way you can do it is back in 2009 if you did it anonymously, that's the only way?

And that's the situation that we have. Like, if I was talking to a young person, I would tell that person, move 1

     out of the United States and launch your cryptocurrency anonymously. This is the situation that's been created.
 3
    people like me who want to be good American citizens, who want 5
     to follow the law, are being driven into the criminal underground.
 6
                And that's a -- I think that's a very bad situation for America and I would hope that -- that this outcome does not further it, whatever happens from here.
 9
10
                THE COURT: Okay. Just a quick comment.
11 probably aren't intending this, but whether you are or not, 12 when you speak of the SEC and me as us, and that we are 13 omnipotent, that's not the way the American judiciary 14 functions. And just so we're clear on that, you know, you're entitled -- 15
16
                MR. KAUFFMAN: Well, what you're taught in school it 17
     turns out is not always reality. Okay?
18
                THE COURT: And you -- 19
                MR. KAUFFMAN: I mean, it's very difficult to 20 believe in the rule of law if you pay attention to the 21 cryptocurrency space.
22
                THE COURT: Hang on a second, sir. I let you speak, so just please let me finish.
23
                What you think doesn't matter, but I didn't want to believe. I would not, though, leave your remark go unnoticed. I don't work for the SEC. I don't respond --MR. KAUFFMAN: Well, so, I mean --THE COURT: Just hang on a minute, sir. You're going to have to stand quiet now and I'll address my remarks to your lawyer. I've given you an opportunity to speak. So, counsel, so you understand, I don't -- I think you understand this. I don't work for the SEC. We aren't working together. This is an independent decision that I've The SEC has its mission and Mr. Kauffman would be surprised, I quess, to understand that I have a great deal of sympathy for the problem that he and LBRY are facing here and I'm actually quite interested in trying to encourage a resolution of this matter in such a way that -- where the SEC would take positions on things like what about the secondary market for the LBRY token. Are there --MR. KAUFFMAN: I --THE COURT: -- ways in which a company like this could function in a way that didn't result in its offering qualifying as a Section 5 requirement to register. I'm actually quite sympathetic to that particular position and I want to encourage the SEC, in dealing with LBRY here, a company where there has been, as far as I'm aware, no allegation of fraudulent activity by LBRY, and in a situation in which at the time it launched, I understand their concern about the lack of clarity in the SEC's position.

And so I -- I share the interest that Mr. Kauffman has identified in trying to make the best of a bad situation here and seeing whether the SEC can be moved to work towards a resolution of this matter with LBRY that might provide some greater clarity.

So I -- I am not omnipotent. I can't order the SEC to do things that it doesn't want to do, except where it's legally required to do so, and I'm not -- I'm not able -- I lack the power to force the SEC to meet with you and try to reach some kind of agreement.

But I would like the SEC's response here. Why shouldn't we take this opportunity to try to resolve what's left of this dispute, if necessary, preserve LBRY's ability to appeal my decision, if that's what it's choosing to do, but also if, as Mr. Kauffman is hinting, that the company's basically dead anyways, why are we wasting a lot of time in trying to get disgorgement of a company that isn't going to survive and is there something we can do to provide greater clarity. For example, what's the SEC's position with respect to people who are holding the LBC token right now other than LBRY?

So can you give me your thoughts about what -- is there anything we can do from the SEC's perspective that will help to resolve what's left of this dispute by agreement and perhaps provide some greater clarity about what happens going forward, and do you really have some legitimate expectation that there's substantial amount of cash available for you to acquire from -- in disgorgement from LBRY or are you just trying to force the company into bankruptcy? MR. MOORES: Your Honor, may -- I believe you're addressing that to me --THE COURT: I am. MR. What I was suggesting beforehand was I was -- we were skeptical of the efficacy of the mediation based upon sort of past discussions, your Honor, and I apologize if I didn't make that clear in terms of, you know, what would be a faster and more efficient way forward. And I'm not going to try to address a lot of what Mr. Kauffman said, but with respect to discussions that we've had in the past with LBRY's counsel, you know, this is the end of 2022. We have had numerous discussions with LBRY's counsel over the years about what would be a pathway in which the sort of offer and sale of LBC would not be a security. And year after year went by and -- and sort of none of those discussions sort of changed the policies or practices that LBRY --THE COURT: Well, let me --

                THE COURT: Mr. Kauffman -- Mr. Kauffman -- 14
                MR. KAUFFMAN: These are simple questions. If 15 the rule of law is real that these are questions that are 16 answerable, so why can't anyone tell me if that's legal. If 17
    the rule of law is clear and fair notice isn't a defense, 18 because the average person -- the average person can understand the law, then these are very clear questions that ought to have 19 20
    yes and no answers that the regulators ought to be able to 21 answer.
22
                THE COURT: All right.
23
                MR. KAUFFMAN: If they -- 24
                THE COURT: All right. Mr. Kauffman, that is 25 enough. Now, this is a court proceeding.

```
MR. KAUFFMAN: Yeah, it's -- because it's all fake.
1
    All right? I'm sorry. This is all fake.
 2
 3
                THE COURT: All right. Mr. Kauffman, this is your 4 last chance. Will you abide by the rules of the court and 5
    speak when I recognize you and otherwise refrain from speaking?
    If you're not willing to abide by those rules, we're going to 6 7 have to deal with you in a different way, like turning off your 8 microphone so you can't speak.
 9
               MR. KAUFFMAN: Yeah, I --
10
                THE COURT: This is a court proceeding. Will you 11 follow my direction, Mr. Kauffman?
12
               MR. KAUFFMAN:
                              Sure.
13
                THE COURT: Okay. Good. So don't speak again 14 unless I recognize you. Okay?
15
               All right. Let me try to go back and make some 16 progress with you, counsel.
17
                I'm not really interested in the past. I'm 18 interested in the future. It doesn't surprise me that you and 19
    Mr. Kauffman have vastly different views about history. Okay?
    That happens in cases I'm involved in all the time.
20 21
                I'm talking about the future because whatever has 22 occurred in the past, it was before I made a ruling. That 23 ruling has now been made. And unless it is reversed on appeal, 24 it is the ruling that will govern what goes forward for both 25 parties in this case.

So it strikes me that now is a time in which the SEC 1 2 should be reaching out again to LBRY, through counsel, and 3 trying to reach an accommodation. 4 And are you willing to do that? 5 MR. MOORES: Yes, your Honor. We've already had a couple of conversations with counsel and we're willing to 6 7 continue those conversations and try to figure out a way that this can be resolved in the best interest of -- of the 8 9 Commission. We can't speak for the Commission ourselves, you 10 know, we're -- you know, in terms of the actual final sort of 11 settlement, but we could come to an agreement as to what we 12 would recommend to the Commission, your Honor. 13 We -- we have engaged in discussions in the past. 14 We are willing to do it in the future --15 THE COURT: Well --16 MR. MOORES: We believe that that would be --17 THE COURT: -- why don't you tell me, just in 18 general, what are your preliminary thoughts about how LBRY 19 could continue to operate and LBC could continue to be used on 20 the LBRY blockchain? Do you have thoughts about how that could 21 happen? 22 MR. MOORES: So, your Honor, as I believe in your 23 opinion, it's -- really, the focus is on the sort of offerings 24 and sale that LBRY had -- had done. And that's -- to be frank, 25 that's not all the LBC that's in circulation, right? This case is about only the ones that were offered and sold by LBRY in the manner and fashion in which they did.

There are ways -- you know, again, this is -- I've been saying this for years. There are ways in which it can be done, even if it is not registered, that, in theory, you know, especially the LBC that is circulating out there today, would not be in violation of the securities laws.

THE COURT: Right. And you're willing to spell those out in negotiations with counsel if I ask you to engage on an expedited basis in mediation, not draw this out six months.

The message I'm getting is the company doesn't have a future that's six months out. They've got to reach agreement, if they're going to, relatively quickly about these matters.

I mean, do you have a realistic expectation that the SEC is going to acquire substantial sums from LBRY by way of disgorgement?

MR. MOORES: Your Honor, representations have been made to us about the lack of resources at the company. We have had financial statements and bank statements over time and so we have a limited visibility into -- into the resources of the company currently.

We don't know what their current resources are, but you know, your Honor, it -- it's really -- I am definitely willing to engage in those conversations, your Honor.

And just as a matter of process, it's the Commission which is going to make the ultimate decision, your Honor --

THE COURT: I -- I understand that, but we've got to move expeditiously here. And this is the -- this is the challenge. And I recognize it can be difficult for you, too. I understand that.

But if, indeed, LBRY were willing to engage in negotiations that led to substantial restriction or even destruction, say, for example, in the -- of the premine here, of the remaining premine in its hands, that would seem to be a good basis going forward to try to reach an agreement that would allow people who believe in the LBRY blockchain as something other than an investment to continue and I would think the SEC would have an interest in trying to do that.

And, you know, if Mr. Kauffman is willing to, as he says he's been for a long time, we don't need to get into the past, to -- to destroy the premine, to -- to do something like that as a starting point, there's no realistic -- I mean, obviously assets could be hidden. This could be very different from what it appears. But it appears very unlikely the SEC could obtain substantial sums in disgorgement here.

Counsel has a -- certainly a credible argument about to the extent the money was placed into business expenses.

It's something that has to be considered when evaluating

1 whether if there is any money it could be paid by way of 2 disgorgement. And, you know, the mission here, I'm sure, it should be, of the SEC is not simply to put LBRY out of 3 4 business. It should be to find a way going forward to address 5 the problem that the SEC saw and, to the extent possible, try to reach some kind of resolution. 6 7 So I -- I -- that's my initial reaction, is that that's what I would strongly encourage the SEC to do, but you'd 8 have to do it on an expedited basis. 9 10 So let me -- let me turn back to LBRY's counsel and 11 ask you. 12 I don't believe I can force the SEC to mediate with 13 you. I think you would understand that. I can't make them 14 agree to give up any rights that they have without evaluating 15 the legal basis for their claims. Now, I've tried to strongly 16 encourage the SEC to engage in discussions with you on an 17 expedited basis. 18 But assume that they don't, that they don't do that, what would be your next step? Would you like to file a legal 19 20 brief asserting your company's position about why the remedies 21 that they've said they want discovery for would not be 22 obtainable against you? Is that -- would that be your 23 position, counsel? 24 MR. MILLER: Yes. Yes, we would like to argue three 25 positions with respect to a permanent injunction, whether that is needed in this situation, both to LBRY and also the secondary users that are using it right now, should they somehow be affected by a -- without clarity from the SEC regarding this injunction.

The next prong would be disgorgement. As I said already, I don't believe they're entitled to disgorgement in this type of situation.

And the third is the amount of civil penalty and what they should be showing in order to get a civil penalty and what that civil penalty should be.

These are all -- your Honor, this, as you -- as you I think rightly observed, this is not a difficult case to settle. It's just whether the SEC wants to settle it. This has a -- this is an opportunity for the SEC to create some clarity around, particularly, secondary sales. Right? And that is very important for the industry. Okay? Even if there's a Section 5 against the entity that issued these tokens and they burned all the premine that's left, there is still operating tokens and they're operating on a large platform with 1.5 million -- over 1.5 million users. They are going to be affected. So how do we deal with that?

And I think there is an opportunity here, if the SEC doesn't want to engage in these types of negotiations through a mediator and we can't agree on what's the best appropriate relief here, then we would ask by next Tuesday, your Honor, if we haven't come up to we're going to mediate on this date by next Tuesday, we apprise the Court that we want to file an emergency motion, legal briefs, on the issue of remedies.

THE COURT: I think that makes sense to me, counsel.

I'll hear the SEC briefly in response, but that's what I'm inclined to do is to give you an opportunity to try to meet and confer and see if you can lay out a path to resolve this -- what remains of the case by agreement. And if you can't, the only step I think available to LBRY would be to file this brief and then I could evaluate the legal issues and decide where we would go from here.

But I -- I do think that there -- it should be in the interest of the SEC to try to explore with LBRY whether there are ways to resolve this case in such a way that people who are other than the -- LBRY itself that are holders of LBC that want to use LBC on the LB -- on the LBRY blockchain, should be able do that and -- without confusion about whether those secondary sales are restricted in some way. And it would seem to me the SEC would be -- should be able to be in a position in settling this particular case to -- to provide some clarity about that.

So I -- I would hope that the SEC would be willing to engage in discussions, but I can't make you and I won't try. I just will say that I -- I'm inclined to accept LBRY's counsel's proposal to allow the filing of an additional brief

1 on remedy with its legal arguments as to why your remedy should 2 be restricted and I hope that the SEC would approach this 3 realistically. 4 I guess I'd ask LBRY's counsel one other thing. 5 So I -- I'm operating under the assumption that 6 there just isn't a lot there to recover from -- by disgorgement 7 or fines, for example, and it appears that financial statements have been exchanged in the past. 8 9 Would LBRY be willing to engage in that kind of transparency going forward in an effort to settle the case, to 10 11 provide some financial assurances regarding its current status 12 to the SEC? 13 So I'd ask you that, counsel, before I ask the 14 SEC --15 MR. KAUFFMAN: I have -- I have them prepared and 16 ready for today. The company -- excluding our cryptocurrency 17 holdings, which I expect will be destroyed, that is, our LBC 18 Holdings which I would expect to be destroyed, we have under 19 $500,000 in cash and we have around $2 million in debts that 20 are unpaid. 21 THE COURT: Okay. 22 MR. KAUFFMAN: I had to borrow $2 million to get 23 through this trial. I borrowed enough money to get us through 24 the end of the year under the expectation that, you know, this 25 would be over by then. And there's -- it's -- there's nothing.

There's absolutely nothing. I've been working the phones. 1 There -- until this is over, there is no chance of us getting 2 3 another dollar from anyone in our network. 4 THE COURT: All right, counsel -- let me talk to 5 counsel then. So, counsel, I guess your client has said that he's 6 7 willing to be transparent regarding his finances. So I -- if the SEC expresses any willingness to have continued 8 discussions, I think that would be a good starting point for 9 you to share some documents on the financial status and see 10 11 where it leads. 12 But let me just ask for a brief response from the 13 SEC here to LBRY's proposal. 14 MR. MOORES: Your Honor, you know, again, we are not 15 opposed to any sort of discussions with trying to resolve it 16 and we will willingly engage from the staff level with LBRY's 17 counsel on that to see if there is a pathway forward. 18 And with respect to -- just taking a step back and looking at sort of the bigger picture that the Commission will 19 20 be considering, it's obviously, as Mr. Kauffman alluded to, 21 that there are a number of other, you know, companies in this 22 space that are potentially raising money and -- illegally or 23 through unregistered offerings. 24 And it's important also to make sure I think from the Commission's perspective, that someone isn't just going to do it thinking that at the end of the game that they won't actually ever have to pay any sort of disgorgement or penalty just based upon their current financial situation.

So I -- I can't speak for the Commission as to what they will ultimately decide on what is the right policy and approach across the industry as to what is appropriate in taking money that is unjustly enriched from the wrongdoer and potentially providing that back to the wronged investors or seeking rescission and restitution, the equitable remedy, but those -- you know, again, looking across the entire industry where there could be clarity that you're seeing that is provided by working out a solution, if it is also a solution that doesn't benefit the Commission in terms of that -- that larger view and policy approach, your Honor, and making sure that, you know, to the extent that LBRY wasn't able to, you know -- and I'm not suggesting it will have the means of doing this -- but if a week from now, a month from now, a year from now, it was able to generate tremendous amounts of revenue based upon the business that was built with the illegal raise, again, due to principles of unjust enrichment, those are just the types of things that are normally disgorged --THE COURT: All right. Let's -- yeah, but let's start being realistic here. Okay? The prospect of that happening appears to be very slim.

So I understand your concerns. I understand your larger -- I understand the Commission's larger concerns.

1
    here's a couple of thoughts to just keep in mind as you think about what to do.
 3
 4
                First, Mr. Kauffman -- and I didn't want -- intend 5 to require anybody to negotiate in public here. These are discussions that you can have -- 6
 7
                MR. KAUFFMAN: I want nothing more than to negotiate 8
     in public.
 9
                THE COURT: All right.
10
                MR. KAUFFMAN: Anyone who sees the SEC negotiate in 11 public with us would see that they are tremendously bad faith 12 actors. I would love it -- 13
                THE COURT: All right. Mr. Kauffman -- 14
                MR. KAUFFMAN: -- if -- 15
                THE COURT: I'm going to ask you to stop.
16 going to ask you to stop talking. You need to exercise self-restraint here.
17
18
                I did not intend to require anyone to disclose 19 anything, but Mr. Kauffman has said multiple times as a part of 20 a resolution of this case he is prepared to burn the remaining 21
    premine. So that's one thing to keep in mind.
22
                Another thing to keep in mind is Mr. Kauffman, 23 through counsel, has agreed to be transparent regarding the 24 company's current financial status. That's something to keep 25 in mind.

Third, with respect to secondary sales, it's -- I understand the concern about precedent that the SEC sets in one case and people need -- and people trying to take -- take advantage, if that would be the SEC's concern, of a resolution in this case. But you need to also bear in mind I rejected the fair notice defense that LBRY raised here, but it is a reality that LBRY entered this market at a time of greater uncertainty than exists now. And if there is a company that lacks sufficient solvency to have any prospect of disgorgement or paying fines, the company is prepared to burn its premine, and some agreement can be raised with respect to this case based on the unique circumstances of this case that the LBC token, regardless of who it was originally acquired from that's not in LBRY's own control or related parties' control, that that -that those secondary sales can continue because LBRY, going forward, will not be in the same way incentivized, aligned with, and engaged in the sale of LBC with the intention of using it as an investment in the way it has previously, that that would seem to be a reasonable starting point for discussion that the SEC should be willing to be at least responsive to.

So I think if you step back and think about what has been said today, you have the framework for a settlement. And I can't make you do anything. I'm not going to try. But I do think counsel -- if counsel for LBRY is not able to get a -- a satisfactory response from you within a week or so, then they 2 should file a status report with me and I'll set a schedule for the legal briefing of the -- LBRY's position that no further 3 4 discovery is warranted and we should have an expedited ruling 5

     from the Court regarding the limited scope of remedy.
                So I think that's a -- a reasonable approach going 6
 7
              I think there is a framework here that is worth exploring and I would strongly encourage the SEC to do that.
 8 9
                So you don't have to agree to anything, you can just stand on your rights as any party in litigation can, but that's 10 11 what I would encourage you to do. And if you don't express 12 sufficient interest in resolving the case, then LBRY can notify 13 me and we'll set a briefing schedule for the briefing of the 14
     legal issue regarding relief.
15
                Let me ask LBRY's counsel, is that acceptable to 16 you?
17
                MR. MILLER: Yes, it is, your Honor. Thank you.
18
                THE COURT: And what's -- what's the date you said
    by which you should file a status report?
19 20
                MR. MILLER: I was thinking next Tuesday.
21
                THE COURT: All right.
22
                MR. MILLER: So it would give us, you know, a week.
23
                THE COURT: It is -- it is over the Thanksqiving holiday, so what I would -- by next Tuesday I'd ask you to file 24
25
     a status report and if you are -- if you don't feel you have
```

made sufficient progress, you should represent that and request 1 2 that the Court set a schedule for briefing the legal issue 3 regarding scope of remedy.
 4
                What I would do is have LBRY file something 14 days 5 thereafter, have the SEC and have LBRY file a reply, and then I 6
    would try to rule on it on an expedited basis to see where we 7
    go from there.
                Counsel, though, because it is over the Thanksqiving 8 holiday, I think you have to be realistic here. And so even if 9 10
    you haven't nailed down everything, if you feel you're making 11 sufficient progress, you could represent to the Court that we 12 should extend that deadline by another seven days or something while you firm up your efforts to -- to resolve things.
13
14
                All right. Does the SEC understand what I'm proposing and did you have any additional matters you wanted to 15
16
     raise with me?
17
                MR. MOORES: No. No, your Honor, we -- we 18 definitely understand and we've heard all your comments today, 19
    your Honor, and we're agreeable to the schedule.
20
                I, like you, caution that it is the Thanksgiving 21 holiday, if the report wasn't due back to the Court until the 22
    Friday, December 2nd. But we -- we are willing to work 23 expeditiously on this, your Honor.

THE COURT: Yeah. And, as I said, there -- SEC -- excuse me.

LBRY has been relatively clear about certain things that it's willing to do and if that isn't a good starting point for settlement for you and you're not willing to pursue it, you should just tell them and we should get on with things. Because I don't know what more they could do to start serious discussions with you than what counsel has proposed. So if that isn't enough for you to get you going on trying to work this thing out, you know, all that would be left is assuring yourself that they haven't profited from this in a way that there's still sufficient profits available for you to extract and having a willingness on your part to come to some kind of understanding because of the unique circumstances of this case, how you would agree to have secondary sale issues resolved. Is that --MR. KAUFFMAN: I --MR. JONES: Your Honor --Yes. I'm sorry. Who's speaking? THE COURT: MR. JONES: Sorry. This is Marc Jones from the SEC. THE COURT: Yeah, go ahead. MR. JONES: I -- I just wanted to raise with the Court, your Honor, that we absolutely understand your expectation is to try to resolve this. Secondary sales, just to try to set expectations here, a resolution that would involve some sort of secondary sales clarity in the way that LBRY seems to be asking for would seem to be beyond the controversy that's before the Court here and difficult to fashion into a -- into a settlement of these matters.

It really is, essentially, an ask to have the SEC make policy through a settled remedy because obviously the way that LBRY gets treated, you know, should be -- you know, there should be consistency across -- across the industry.

We will see what we can do, but I did not want the Court to conclude today without saying it could be very difficult for the SEC to fashion a policy about secondary sales in this circumstance because it really is policy and we're constrained by all of the things that have to go into it before the SEC makes policy; that to try to -- to try to create it in a -- either a settled or adjudicated --

THE COURT: Yeah, I'm not -- I understand -- I understand, counsel, the problem that anytime you take any position in any matter that someone might try to then me-too it. And I'm not interested in participating in SEC policymaking, but I've got a problem here. Right?

The problem here is this. You've got a company that without fraudulent intent, at a time when things were less certain than they are now, engaged in certain practices and developed a blockchain that has legitimate uses and a token that has consumptive uses.

And it seems to me reasonable that in an effort to settle this case, not as to establish systemwide policy, that the SEC should be willing to consider whether there are creative solutions to resolve this problem in a way such as that the LBRY -- the people who created LBRY and who hope to profit from the sales of securities aren't profiting from it, but that people who acquired the token because they believe it has use on the LBRY blockchain, that the LBRY blockchain should not be -- have to become dysfunctional simply to satisfy the SEC. That -- that seems to me to be a -- an issue worth exploring.

At the end of the day, whether you decide to pursue that or not is totally up to the SEC. It's not within my province. I give legal rulings. And I'll give you a legal ruling on the remedy if you aren't able to reach an agreement. And that's the way it goes. I -- I don't --

MR. KAUFFMAN: We --

THE COURT: -- set policy and I'm going to -- I'm going to make a legal ruling if the parties can't agree.

But I've gone about as far as I possibly can and I won't go further except to say I expect LBRY to file by next Tuesday a status report either informing the Court that settlement negotiations have been sufficiently productive that they should continue or that the Court should set a schedule for briefing a -- LBRY's motion the limited scope of remedy

1 without further discovery. 2 I'm not ruling out that I might need discovery or 3 have to hold a hearing, but I'm -- I want to hear LBRY's 4 arguments about why disgorgement is simply not an appropriate 5 remedy here, how the scope of injunctive relief should be limited as a matter of law. They have an argument. They have 6 7 briefed these issues responsively. Counsel did a highly effective job arguing LBRY's position. And I'm inclined to 8 give counsel the leeway to present additional briefs if the 9 10 parties can't agree on settlement negotiations. 11 All right. So, Jen, you understand what I'm 12 ordering from here? You should just make a note that we should 13 expect a filing from LBRY by next Tuesday either regarding a 14 request that the Court extend the deadline for settlement 15 discussions further or that the Court set a schedule for 16 briefing LBRY's position on remedy. All right? 17 THE CLERK: Yes, Judge. And I just would say as a 18 housekeeping matter there is a pending Daubert motion that's 19 still active on the docket. 20 THE COURT: That's denied without prejudice. 21 right? We'll see where we go from there. 22 MR. KAUFFMAN: I --

23 THE COURT: That clears the docket on that.

24 MR. KAUFFMAN: Judge, just you're aware, public that time period, the SEC has not indicated in a clear way that a single public blockchain, not one of them, is not a security.

They haven't issued a single no-action letter to any company give clarity to secondary sales. And without that clarity on secondary sales, it is true that the LBRY project will be dead.

           And that's okay. I -- I'm just -- I'm moving forward. I have to move forward realistically as a CEO and for my people. And this is what -- the SEC got what they wanted.
It's fine.
           I'm not trying -- again, they win. They've got all the power. I'm not trying -- but that is what will happen.
           And I would just -- like realistically they can say,
oh -- they can act like they're going to talk about it.
They're not going to entertain it.
           THE COURT: And they --
           MR. KAUFFMAN: There's no chance. So --
           THE COURT: They have the right not to entertain it and your lawyer has the right to on your behalf file a legal memorandum that will prevent --
           MR. KAUFFMAN: I'm just letting you know. You can say things like, oh, I don't want LBRY to be hurt or whatever, but they -- they -- in reality, they -- it's -- it will have been killed by them. And -- and I certainty blame them more 1 than you, but you certainly get a bit of an assist.
```

 2
 3
                So, like, that's going to be the outcome. I accept 4 it. I'm not mad. I'm not trying to be mad at you. That's 5 what -- it is what it is. But that's --
                THE COURT: That's all right. You can be mad at me.
 6
 7
    I'm used to people being mad at me. That's -- it comes with the territory.
 8
                MR. KAUFFMAN: Well, you're much better than them.
 9
    I mean, I -- I understand why they -- you know, you trust them, 10 11 you have -- it's difficult to see through their -- you know, to 12 see through their lies in such a short time period. You 13 haven't seen -- 14
                THE COURT: If your counsel were in the room with you right now, he'd be grabbing your coattails. So -- 15
16
                MR. KAUFFMAN: Oh, it doesn't matter. It's -- you 17
    know, I -- you know, I -- you know -- 18
                THE COURT: Okay. Let's -- let's -- we've had 19 enough back and forth, Mr. Kauffman. I'm not here to engage in 20 dialogue with you.
21
                So -- all right. So we're done for today. I'll 22 look for your filing, counsel, and we'll -- we'll go from 23
    there.
24
                All right? Thank you. That concludes the hearing.
25
                (Proceedings concluded at 2:54 p.m.)
